

Development cooperation

Norwegian expertise and experience can be useful for countries in the developing world. For many years, Vista Analysis has collaborated with international partners in professional, economic and social development cooperation. Our efforts have often focused on environment, climate change and clean energy, but a wide range of other sectors have also been covered. Many projects have taken place in China and other Asian countries, but we also have experience from several African countries and from Latin America. In addition to the expertise and experience that is generated through our own projects, several of our consultants have experience from bilateral and multilateral development organizations, including in economic development, public finance and public governance issues. We also have consultants with PhD degrees in development economics, and publications in peer reviewed journals on development issues. Our combination of practical and academic experience provides a firm basis for our development cooperation projects.
